

I am currently a caregiver for my husband & at the same time we have custody of a grandchild. I have KLOVE on at home & in the car-it helps tremendously by keeping my focus on God who can carry this load and off Karen who is unable to do so! It's like CNN of the spiritual world in that it keeps me up to date on Christian concerns (ie praying for the Burnams(sp?)). My grandchild has decided to listen to this station instead of her rap music-that is a joy! I am afraid the LPFM broadcaster would not carry KLOVE which is a huge help for me, but I am 62 and my faith is rock solid. What about the ones listening whose faith is not firm, who are trying to raise children pleasing to God, who are trying to make changes so they can honor their marriage vows, who are deep in charge card debt and need to hear financial teachings, who are trying hard to feel at home in this secular world & to have the tools to be a witness to others; these are only a few examples, you do not have room to list all the ways KLOVE impacts its listeners). We have a Christian station with commercials-that does not enable you to walk through your day focused on God.
